"That Newspaper Woman."

At the recent Sorosis dinner at Delmonico's in New York Mrs. Eliza Archard Conner made the following characteristic speech, which will be read with great interest by our masculine

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN-Once "Ladies and Gentlemen—Once there was an orator who was going to make a very great speech. He rose to his feet, looked his audience in the face, and solmnly asked: 'Why-e-e was I born?' Then he forgot his piece. He shifted from his right foot to his left, and once more solemnly asked: 'Why-e-e was I born?' Just then a naughty boy in the gallery sang out: 'I give it up!'
"Now, to-night, if I should ask my-winning ways conquer us every time. When we go home from our labors amid the toiling, molling masses they greet us with a sweet smile, and have our slippers ready for us at the fireside. Their lighter wit and sparkling eyes rest and refresh us after our graver, severy deliberations. To win a smile from verer deliberations. To win a smile from their rosy lips we will do all things and dare all things. At last that would be a strange sort of a woman who didn't care for man's smile. We haven't any softness, bless you!"

"My theme inspires the imagination. It soars even into the realm of so-called of these articles contain the most vigorous metaphysics. To me, the most impressive legend in al! literature is the story of the devil and Dr. Faust. You remember how Faust sold his human experience. Sometimes I think, upon my word, that it was worth the cest. To know all things, to be all things! Since ever I can remember that has been the crowning desire of my life."

of these articles contain the most vigorous and aggressive thought on the political aspects of the Prohibition movement. The warious other departments of the Magazine are well filled, and "The World's Progress" is very readable. A beautiful oil picture, "Early Spring" forms the frontispiece, and aphotogravure of "The Muezzin" is very striking.

"There is a system of philosophy taught in occult doctrines of Buddhism taught in occult doctrines of Buddhism that promises to gratify my wish. According to that, development is the aim of life. Every soul must gain all human experience. For this object it is born over and over again into different bodies in successive ages. If this be true, some of us may have been our great-great-great-grandmothers. Sometimes the soul is born as a man, sometimes as a woman; for both the manly and womanly qualities are necessary for and womanly qualities are necessary for its full development. For instance, if a many has wronged women, and has been cruel to them; if he has deprived them of their legal and civil right, in his next incarnation he will have to be a woman and the standard to be a woman and the incarnation he will have to be a woan, so as to find out how it is himself.

Is a lovely arrangement.
Rentlemen, if I should be a man in my next life, I shall pay off the grudges
I owe you in this. When you area woman and I am a man, I'll have my revenge for all the times you have broken my heart in this life. I hope to do it neatly, but thoroughly. I am not conscious of ever having wanted to be a man, especially, but if a man I must be, then I hope to be a New York man.
The men of this great city always stand up for women—especially in the street cars and the five-cent L trains. [New

A short time ago a poor laborer here dropped dead at his work. He was earning a dollar a day and left a wife and seven children. The widow was nearly distracted. There seemed only starvation for her and her seven babies. Rougs & Suns DECLARED SWINDLERS.

Important Verdict Against Bohemia Oats Agents in Seneca County.

TIFFIN, O., Feb. 19.-The Bohemian oat swindle got a black eye in Common Pleas Court here Wednesday. As this county is the birth-place of the swindle, the decision was looked upon with great interest, and the Court-room was crowded with members of the gang, many of whom are beginning to feel ill at ease.

The case was as follows: John Heydinger first bought oats of the ssociation, and received a bond that they would sell double the amount for him. The following year the agent of the association following year the agent of the association fulfilled the boud, and sold a certain number of bushels for Heydinger, receiving from him a cash commission of $2.50 per bushel. Ten bushels of these oats were sold to W. P. Humphrey, Druggist, Napoleon. fis-ly Marquis, of Venice township, this county, he giving his note for $100 in favor of Heydinger, and receiving the usual bond from the association. The bond was not fulfilled, and Marquis refused to pay the note. Heydinger who still held the note, brought suit for the same with interest.

Heydinger was represented by Lester Sutton, of Attiea, and Marquis by J. C. Rickennaughty boy in the gallery sang out:

'I give it up!'

"Now, to-night, if I should ask myself what I am standing here for and should answer, I should say 'I give it up!' For one thing. I am here at the bequit of a lady whose lightest wish is and always will be law to me, a lady whom all good Sorosians obey—our honored President. Being here, I am aware that I shall seem like an idiot if I don't say something. There is too, the horid suspicion that I may seem stiff more like an idiot if I do say something. However, we must take risks.

"If my tongue should follow the direction of my thoughts, of course, there is only one theme of which I can speak. That is our guests of the evening from the other side of the fence, the gentlemen, God bless them! We welcome them here and everywhere—that is, almost everywhere. Their sweet, bright faces are an inspiration to us. Their winning ways conquer us every time. When we go home from our labors

"The jury, after being out several hours, last ton, of Attica, and Marquis by J. C. Rickenbaugh, of this city, and L. C. Feighner, of Bucyrus, who made an able fight against the swindle. Judge Dodge, in charging the jury said that "if they found that Heydinger or his agent knew, at the time of the sale, that there was any swindle in the matter, or would be at any future time, or had any reasonable ground to suppose there was or would be (and it is hard to see how any man, taking into consideration the exhorbitant price of the grain, could fail to see that it would run out some time) a swindle, then the note was void and the Court would leave the matter where it was. Owing to the number and prominence of the men engaged in the business he did not like to call it a swindle from the face of the transaction, but would leave that for the jury to decide. But if the jury decided that Heydinger was a swindler, Marquis, having accepted a bond to do the same thing, was also one to all intent and purpose."

The jury, after being out several hours, leave the swing that "eight against the swindle. baugh, of this city, and L. C. Feighner, of baugh, of this city, and L. C. Feighner, of Bucyrus, who made an able fight against the swindle. Judge Dodge, in charging the jury said that "if they found that Heydinger or his agent knew, at the time of the sale, that his agent knew, at the time of the sale, that was also one to all intent and purpose." The jury, after being out several hours, last evening returned a verdict that the oats business was a swindle and the note was void. The jury was composed of good substantial, business men and farmers.

"Believe me, we adore the gentlemen; that is to say, in their own sphere. Nothing so shocks us as to see a man lose the delicacy and the native modesty of his sex. That peculiar softness of man is his most charming attribute in woman's eyes. Losing it, he loses all. No, gentlemen! don't do it. Be content with the sphere for which nature has ordained you. Don't lose your softness, bless you!"

The March number of Demorest's mag-azine will be found unusually interesting. "A Quaint Cuban City," "Siasconset," and "The Two Esthers," are remarkably good articles. Pay Your Small Debts.

The Cincinnati Enquirer makes the following sensible remarks on the hard times question. "Now, it is a short but absolutely unanswerable effort at busiabsolutely unanswerable effort at business logic to show that if all people who owe small current accounts and are unquestionably able to pay their debts would do so, and that without delay, there would be put into circulation in the direct channels of trade such a volume of the circulating medium as would almost magically act to relax and relieve the pressure of the hard times. We may look till our eyes are strained toward the great many depositors in banks and sub-treasuries as the source of the needed relief, but the relief will only come when the individual small of the needed relief, but the relief will only come when the individual small debtor, up to the limit of his ability, pays up his small account at the tailor's, the grocer's, the butcher's, the milliner's, the dry goods store, and in the book stores; even if this just act, this deed of commonest honesty, is attended to at the cost of having to stay at home all summer from Sarators or at home all summer from Saratoga or the coast resorts. The debtors amount of currency turned into the channels of their pockets without a word, and in less than a week's time the woman had $500. It was more money than she ever would have got at once from her husband, so that he did her more good by dropping dead than he would have done if he had lived."

"I have many a time admired the good looks of the New York men. Take a gentleman out of his promonade on Fifth avenue of an afternoon. From his polished boots to the carnation in his button-hole, he is perfectly costumed. His face is bright with the flush of health and conscious stringth. He looks the perfection of manhood. What wonder then that I close with this sentiment: 'A health less than a week's time the woman had 500 fcurrency turned into the channels of the trade would set the little wheels of business spinning all over the land; the jobber and wholesaler in turn would get fresh encouragement in his trade by the increase from his widely scattered customers, and the great maunfacturers would, before the end of the year, feel the irresistible impulse from the tide of creditors' payments, and almost before we are aware of it, business of all kinds would be on the boom."
